KIRK: CAN YOU IMAGINE A COSMETIC SURGEON WEARING JEANS AND SNEAKERS?

Being in the business of making people look good means I need to look good, too. I've been a loyal customer of Boyds for 20 years now. It really is the only one-stop shop for men in Philadelphia.

A few years ago Boyds sponsored a fashion show for a fundraising event Stephanie co-chaired. I went to select my outfit and Bill said, "Why don't you switch it up and try something contemporary?" My Etro suit was a huge hit that night. I looked in the mirror and thought, "Wow! I look just like a Beverly Hills surgeon from Dr. 90210!"

Stephanie: My first Boyds experience was in January 1997, when I realized at 3 p.m. on the day of a ball that I had forgotten to pack my evening handbag. Kirk assured me a quick trip to Boyds would take care of my fashion crisis, and it did. We found the perfect clutch, which has been a favorite of mine ever since.

Even though I have very long legs and arms, Boyds always has a big selection of sportswear that fits me. I also do a lot of volunteer work and like to look professional for meetings. Ralph Lauren, Armani, Tory Burch and Milly are what I tend to purchase. I have this one powder blue Armani jacket that I'm surprised isn't threadbare! It never fails to make me feel dynamite.

The look of luxe: Kirk is ready for his close-up in a Canali celery- and-blue glen plaid jacket, a Duchamp blue tone-on-tone print dress shirt, Trussini light olive pants and an Etro pocket square. Stephanie looks gorgeous in a D&G dress.
